Introduction

One of the genealogical projects undertaken by the Hantsport & Area Historical Society in the early 1990s was the creation of an index for the Hantsport School Registers. At the time, two or three people were hired each summer as researchers for the Society and tour guides for the Churchill House and Marine Memorial Room. Photocopies of the original school registers were obtained from the Nova Scotia Archives and the information was transcribed and entered in a database program using a vintage PC.

Each grade and school year were printed out and proofreading was done by Society members and volunteers from the community familiar with the names and families. The corrections were then made to the data files but some of the photocopies and printouts were never returned and work on the project lapsed.

In the summer of 2020 a box containing a mix of photocopied registers and printouts was uncovered at the McDade Heritage Centre. Many boxes like it had been in storage after a water pipe froze and burst upstairs at the Churchill House. Records from the school year 1928/29, being one of the most complete, were transcribed and published on the Society's website; mcdadeheritagecentre.ca

Recently the backup floppy disks containing the data for all the years were discovered and form the basis of this publication. We are very fortunate because, beginning in 1999, the original school registers were "deaccessioned" by the Nova Scotia Archives and some have since been lost. The information presented here is the next best substitute, however it comes with a caution that proofreading and error correction is incomplete and perhaps no longer possible.

As an additional aid to researchers, the Genealogical Association of Nova Scotia has kindly granted permission for the article "School Records, a Previously Hidden Genealogical Resource" by Joan Parks-Hubley published in the Fall 2001 issue of The Nova Scotia Genealogist Vol. XIX/3 to be reprinted here.

School Records - A Previously Hidden Source for Genealogical Research

by Joan Parks-Hubley, Halifax N.S.

[Originally published in The Nova Scotia Genealogist Vol. XIX/3, Fall 2001. Reprinted by permission.]

The instructions to teachers on the Explanation of Register section of an 1895 school register state: "This register is the property of the School Trustee and the sheets when filled are to be carefully preserved by their Secretary and delivered to his successor in office. In future years, the record of the obscurest section may be of great value". For the family historian in search of more detail about the daily lives of ancestors, nothing could be more true. School records provide yet another primary record source for researchers. They may contain information previously unknown or at the least, they can provide evidence to support or dispute other findings.

When Nova Scotia Archives and Records Management began their School Registers Deaccessioning Project in 1999, a new source for genealogical research in Nova Scotia was unveiled. In reviewing the literature to date, little appears to have been written regarding school registers and how they can be used in family research. Since some researchers may associate school registers with attendance records only, it is worthwhile to demonstrate the range of useful information which can be found in old school registers.

Before beginning to examine school registers, it would be helpful to consider the following:

- (1) The exact time frame of school attendance and the precise location an ancestor lived. (School sections consisted of a 4 mile radius). Also, is it possible an ancestor attended school at the nearest largest town? This was not uncommon, especially during the high school years.
- (2) What the name of the community was at the time an ancestor lived there. For example, a community now known as Rhodes Corner was called Snyder's at the time my ancestors lived there. Without this information, it might be falsely assumed there were no pertinent records.
- (3) What information is sought that is not known currently and what information is known which could be confirmed or disputed with the help of school records.
- (4) Where are the required registers now located and are there actually school registers for the locations and years to be researched. In some instances, there may be no records because there was no school in the community at the time. For example, in 1882 in Lunenburg County, 20 sections had no school as yet. In other cases, the registers desired will not have survived or were not turned over to the authorities and could still be in an attic of an old home somewhere.

What to look for in the School Register

School registers can provide information about at least three key groups the School Register of people: pupils, teachers and school trustees. It is important to take the time to review the whole school register, not just the list of pupils. The school register typically consisted of about eight pages with information that might be of interest scattered throughout. It is advisable to make a photocopy if at all possible. Then critically examine every item in the register, consider its accuracy and how the information might be utilized in researching the family line.

Pupils

(a) Names

The register should list the child's 'full name'. Teachers were instructed, as in a 1907 register, to record "full names, not initials, nicknames or diminutives". A school register can be helpful in confirming the full given name of a pupil, as in the case of a family who were able to establish that their mother's given name was Eglah Dora Walters, not Doris, as their father had reported. The name given in registers throughout her school years was consistent with her birth certificate. There can, however, be discrepancies and errors in school registers. Napeon William Westhaver of Fralig, Lunenburg County was mistakenly referred to as Lupean William Westhaver in 4 of 7 registers available for review. This case clearly demonstrates the need to review more than one year's register and the wisdom of checking other primary sources for confirmation of data. Careful examination of surnames can alert the researcher to possible step-family relationships or adoptions. For example, a child with the same family name in the 1901 census is found to be going by the name of her mother's deceased first husband in earlier school registers. This finding would require consulting further sources to determine parentage.

(b) Ages/Dates of Birth

Each register records the ages of pupils, though the earliest ones give only an age in years. Around 1893, the format of the school register changed and teachers were requested to record the child's age in years, months and days as of a particular date, usually 1 August of that school year. Obviously, to find a pupil's birth date, it is necessary to do some calculations. The reliability of this aspect of the register may vary widely, depending on the teacher's mathematical ability and attention to detail. Author Dr. Terrence Punch, in his book, Genealogical Research in Nova Scotia cautioned that this data could be off by as much as four years.

(c) Names of Parents or Guardians

All school registers list the name of a parent or guardian of the pupil. This part of the register is particularly helpful in linking up siblings of an ancestor. It is possible to find children that may have been missed in baptismal records or who were not born by 1901 and therefore, not documented by the last census records that can be accessed. Typically, if living, it was the child's father that was listed, even if he was away working or not living with the family. For example, a child of a Whynot family is found listed in a Bridgewater school register, while her father is listed as living in New Brunswick. It is not clear whom she was living with but this information provides clues for further research on the family. It is also common to discover children living with family members other than their parents. These may have been legally appointed guardians but more often they represent informal “foster care” arrangements. In other cases, an older child may be boarding with a neighbour in return for providing child care, domestic duties or labour on a farm. For example, in a Pine Grove school register, one son of a local Dauphinee family is recorded as living with a neighbouring family who are listed as his guardians. Reviewing a number of school registers which span the child’s school days may help to reveal the nature and durability of their relationship with the guardian listed.

(d) Relocation

During the latter part of the nineteenth century and well into the twentieth century, there was a high degree of mobility in Nova Scotian families. While it was common to find migration to New England and central and western Canada, some new families also moved within or to the province. Happily on occasion, it is possible to find a notation in the school register regarding the relocation of a family. For example, in one old Tancook Island register the statement “Moved to Montreal” was found beside the child’s name. It is also possible to track families via the school register by narrowing down the year of a move. In researching a Westhaver family from Fralig who moved to Newton, Massachusetts, the year of the move was pinpointed by reviewing school registers between 1897 and 1911. This family had four children attending school during those years and a father who was a school trustee. By 1911-1912 the family disappeared from the Fralig school registers completely. Using city directories in Massachusetts, it was possible to locate this family again living in Newton in 1912.

(e) Visitors

Early school registers record the name, place of residence and date of all visitors to the school. Usually the visitor’s signature can be found as well. Unfortunately, in later registers, only the number of visitors was recorded and a rich source of information is lost. Using the visitors section of the register may assist in locating family members who were missing from other local records after 1901. One notation in an old Lunenburg Country register stated “Florence Lohnes, Granite Village, 23 October, 1901”. It is also common to see visitors from New England locations. If a number of individuals visited on the same day, it is useful to look for familial relationships not only with the pupils and teacher but among the visitors as well.

(f) Attendance

The record of attendance was of utmost importance to the Provincial Department of Education, as in some counties only one in 4 or 5 children were attending school by the late 1800’s. Even where a large number of children were registered in school, the average attendance may have been much lower than desired. In 1893 in Lunenburg County, the average attendance was only 52% of those registered. Attendance records will likely have a high degree of reliability since teachers were warned that they could lose their provincial grants for not accurately recording attendance. For the family historian, reviewing the number of days a pupil attended school may lead to consideration of the priority placed on education by the family, the child’s home responsibilities, or the health of the child.

| (g) Health                | School registers may show notations about epidemics such as measles or diphtheria. This information might lead to a possible explanation for deaths of children in the community during this time frame. For example, in 1906, schools in Bridgewater were closed for 10 weeks due to a measles epidemic. Later registers record vaccinations and mention numbers of conscientious objectors although not names.  |
| (h) Conduct/Progress | The section of the register which rates the pupils' progress and conduct gives marks between 1 (low) and 5 (high). Registers show a wide range of marking patterns, representing some subjectivity on the teacher's part. Sometimes the pupil's standing in the class is noted. On one occasion in school registers reviewed, "0" was given to an entire family of Fraser children in the class.  |
| Teachers                  | For the genealogist who is researching an ancestor who was a teacher, the school register is a very useful tool. Information contained on the register details the type of teaching license held (A-D), the date their license was granted, the number of years of teaching experience, whether the teacher had specialized training at the Normal College or university, and their annual salary. The register itself presents an example of the teacher's own hand writing and their work which is of great interest to a researcher fortunate enough, as I was, to find their grandmother's and other relative's school registers. |

Taking the time to examine many different school registers across a county can enable you to plot the teacher's career and may eventually help in the identification of school pictures that may be in your family's possession. Noting the names of other teachers employed at the same school may provide sources of information about your ancestor. When reviewing Tancook Island school registers, I discovered that a retired university professor that I was acquainted with had spent his first year of teaching with my grandmother on Tancook Island. Upon following up with him, I learned that they had also boarded at the same home and he was able to share some memories of that school year.

The school register can lead to other print sources about teachers as well. If your ancestor attended the Normal College, later known as the Teacher's College in Truro, Nova Scotia, between 1869 and 1989, then you can access their college records in the Little White School House Museum in Truro. You can see their college application form, find the name and address of the family they boarded with and can have a copy made of their transcript of marks. I found the 1904 college transcript of my grandmother also recorded comments such as "promising, though juvenile" and ranked her as 14th in her class. The 1905 transcript on my great aunt described her as "small but very well-appearing and of good disposition".

The Journals of Education and the annual Reports of the Superintendent of Education for Nova Scotia are other excellent sources for those researching teachers. These documents can be viewed by microfilm at NSARM and hard copy at the Little White School House Museum. The Journals of Education, among other things, explain the licensing of teachers, list all the schools in existence for that year, given the names of all teachers, the number of teaching days employed, the amount each teacher was paid from the Provincial Treasury and even notes those teachers who were employed in the poor sections of each county. Also recorded were Pass Lists for Provincial High School Examinations. For example, I found my great uncle, Ralph Hartley Wetmore, passed Grade X examinations in Yarmouth in 1907 with an aggregate of 775, well above the minimum aggregate of 400.

Where no school registers exist, the Journal of Education can sometimes yield information not found anywhere else. When perusing the Journal of Education for 1913, I discovered that yet another great aunt in my Silver family line had been teaching school and at the same school with my grandmother. This previously unknown fact was buried in a section of the Journal which published the names of teachers completing Phenological Observations and the number of observations made during the school year. There I found listed "Lottie M. Silver, Dayspring, 51 and Marion Silver, Dayspring, 85". This obscure entry was of special interest to our family, both because Marion married a Harvard botany professor and it was not known that she had been teaching prior to her marriage.

Additional sources for those researching teachers are local community histories that have been published over the years and local newspapers. In a small book, Yesterdays in Conquerall Bank by Pearl Rafuse, I found a detailed paragraph expressing the fondness of students for one of their teachers, Florence Silver. This little find about another of my great aunts was quite unexpected, as I was not aware that our family had any connection to Conquerall Bank.

Trustees

School registers contain the names and signatures of the school trustees and may indicate dates of their visits and comments regarding the school. By reviewing registers, I discovered that many of my ancestors in Lunenburg County had functioned as trustees of the schools in their small communities.

The Board of Three Trustees formed the executive body for the school section, which averaged about 4 miles in diameter. Each year one trustee retired at the annual meeting of rate payers of the section and a new trustee was elected. The Board of Trustees, through its secretary, collected and disbursed the money voted at the annual meeting to be assessed on the section. They also engaged the teacher, took charge of school property and its repair, equipped the school with necessary resources, such as desks, books and maps and selected a principal if more than one teacher was employed.

There is no question that school trustees were given a great deal of responsibility, both financially and in terms of judgment. In the Report of the Superintendent of Education 1892-1896, it states: "The trustee is to see that children are making progress - that there is life in the school, both intellectually and morally.” George Peabody in his 1992 book, School Days - The One-Room Schools of Maritime Canada, describes the dilemma that faced trustees as being “the wish for a good school that would provide an acceptable education for the children of the district and the wish to keep the rates down”. How trustees were viewed by the Department of Education likely varied. However, H. H. MacIntosh, the provincial inspector of schools, reported in 1893 “Trustees are ready to do what they can to benefit the school and are generally prompt in making necessary improvements”.

Trustees were responsible to keep the school registers and minutes of annual meetings of the school section and to submit minutes to the Superintendent of Education. Some trustee and school board minutes are available and can give you some insight into the activities of the Board of Trustees.

For the family researcher, finding evidence of an ancestor holding the position of school trustee, demonstrates commitment to their community and some level of support or respect from their fellow rate payers. As with discovering the church, military or other affiliations of family members, learning about their school trustee role adds another human dimension to their lives of so long ago.

Conclusion

Conducting research using any new source can be challenging and exciting. As usual, if you are willing to be persistent and to “wring out” all the information from these little used sources, in this case, school registers and other school records, there are rewards to be had which can only strengthen your research efforts. Individuals with roots in any of the counties in Nova Scotia are encouraged to add school records to their list of sources to be explored.
